ON THE DECLINE?

President Is Said Not to Be as Strong a Supporter as He Formerly Was.

> OKLAHOMA FIASCO

Secretary of War Announced That Southern States Were Stagnant.

Times-Dispatch Bureau, Munsey Bullding, Washington, D. C., Nov. 3. It is believed that important developments will follow the return of Sec-retary Taft to this country on De-cember 12th. It is considered practicalretary Taft to this country on December 12th. It is considered practically settled that the secretary will make important changes in the management of his campaign for the presidential nomination. His friends say he will probably make a change in the management. They do not think such a thing as his retirement is to be considered for a moment.

There is a growing belief that the president is not nearly so strong a Taft man as once he was. The Taft boom has been much of a flash in the pan. It has not excited nearly the enthusiasm expected, and there are indications that his campaign is positively dragging. Unless there is impropement by the time Mr. Taft returns to America he will be compelled to make changes in the management, and resort to other means of injecting life into his fight.

It has been stated several times that Secretary Taft's friends would probably insist upon the President's making a further announcement regarding the third term.

It is not known that they will induce Mr. Roosevelt to say anything further on this subject at an early date but the President has said he would make a statement of this character as soon as a Republican State Convention should instruct a delegation to support him in the national Oklahoman

Changes His Mind.

Appointment Is Unlikely Unless Pope Piux X. Suddenly

Changes His Mind.

KOME, November 2—Americans, probably, in secret heartly indorse the words of Cardinal Hernado, "What is a cardinal but a whim of the Pope," For here we are on the eve of another consistory, and if Plus X does not expect one of those surprises or which he is so fond, Americans, even this time, will have no new cardinal.

Considering the question Japassionately, can does not see how the Pontiff can held our much longer against the claims of the Ubitted States for a better representation at the sacred college, Plus X's reluctance, one in light almost say his determination, arises from two causes—difficulty of choice and the succession of the American cliving. Archbishops Ireland, Farley, Ryancach would honor the purple—each has a very good claim, not to speak of other prelates who are less in the public eye.

Unjust to Cardinal Gibbons.

The henevolent regard that the Vatican has for Archbishop Farley would seem to place him first on the list, he being the head of the most important docese in America. But Archbishop Farley would seem to place him first on the list, he being the head of the most important docese in America. has been limited to seventy, although there are rarely more than skxty at one time. As the United States is the fourth Catholic power in the world in regard to the number or municants, sile ought to have eight cardinals. She has only one, while little Spain at the present moment has six.

Twelve Vacqueles in College. There are, or course, many considerat tions besides population, and several Catholic countries have an oid-established right to a certain number of cardinals. The "plenum" has never purposely been reached since 1753, it being considered better to have one or two vacancies for emergencies. The vacancies number now tweive, the ranks of the college having recently been thinned by deaths. Notwithstanding this fact, the appointments of the present pontiff have been few, although Cardinal Rhiadine will shortly receive the red hat—but he is a creation of the last consistory.

England will also be disappointed at the coming consistory, although she has always been accustomed to have a cardinal in the Archdiocess of Westminister, while Canada must give up the hope of having another to replace Cardinal Taschereau.

Now, as to the accusation of being too "modern," the American Catholic clerge, while always showing themselves abreast of the time, are among the most loyal children the Holy See has, but Plus X wants semething more than loyalty.

Plus Wants Submission.
